Gunlocke's FSC Mixed Credit System:

Gunlocke uses FSC certified wood material inputs from suppliers with valid FSC chain of custody certification numbers to sell products labeled as FSC Mixed Sources. We are only allowed to label a certain amount of our products equal to the amount of credits that we have accumulated in our FSC credit ledger. In general, we are using FSC core wood materials to build the credit in our FSC credit ledger.

In layman's terms, credit is accumulated by purchasing FSC certified wood material inputs and is consumed when we sell FSC labeled products. We are never allowed to sell more FSC labeled units than we have accumulated in our credit account. If we know of a larger order that will be coming, we can accumulate credits in our credit ledger by purchasing and using FSC certified materials in advance of the order.

Questions & Answers

If Gunlocke is using the FSC mixed credit system, then why are the veneers limited to five (cherry, maple, walnut, rift oak, stratawood) for standard products?

We are using the option codes for the veneers in our catalog and bill of materials to specify an FSC order.

What if a customer asks for FSC veneer or FSC core materials?

We could do this as special, but it would be better for any customer working on a LEED project to consider buying our products labeled with an FSC Mixed Sources label. Why is this better for customers? Under the FSC mixed credit system, 100% of the dollars spent on our FSC labeled products contributes to MR 7.0 under the LEED-CI rating system. For example, if we were to use an FSC pure veneer on a product, there would be an increase in price beyond the FSC upcharge, and there would be no additional contribution to LEED-CI MR 7.0.

How can Gunlocke's FSC products contribute to a LEED project?

Our control system is the credit system, which means that we sell FSC labeled casegoods and conference tables based on the amount of FSC certified materials (inputs) that we use. Under the credit control system, 100% of every dollar spent on the wood portion of an FSC labeled casegood or conference table counts towards MR 7.0.
